Introduction

The Orange Regional Disability Services Directory was developed to provide a compact, detailed listing of services for people with disability living in Orange and the surrounding area.

The guide aims to assist people to identify and engage services which can help them to remain engaged in the life of our community.

This guide has been developed by Orange City Council's Choices at Home and funded by 2016 ClubGRANTS.

Orange City Council

Orange City Council is involved in the provision of a wide range of services for older people, people with disability and their carers.

Choices at Home is supported by financial assistance from Orange City Council.

Choices at Home is supported by financial assistance from the NSW Government.

Supported by the Australian Government Department of Health. Visit the Department of Health's website (www.agedcare.health.gov.au) for more information.

Education

Anson Street School

Anson Street School caters for students who are diagnosed with additional needs, such as students on the Autism Spectrum, students with moderate and severe intellectual disabilities, students with moderate or severe physical disabilities and students who have mental health concerns. Students access the specialised support of our school through an Access Request and School Counsellor Disability Confirmation.

Our school's initiatives include a Tutorial Program and a Return to School Program located across from the main site, as well as a functioning farm, sailing program and access to Riding for the Disabled.

Alternative and adaptive programs are designed and reviewed to help assist all students at our school. This includes the way the curriculum is taught to make a meaningful curriculum and life and living skills are taught practicality. The school follows the NSW BOSTES curriculum and some children access mainstream subjects as well as VET subjects and work placement.

National Disability Coordination Officer (NDCO)

What is the NDCO Program? It is a priority for the Australian Government to assist people with disability enter tertiary education and find a job in order to increase economic and social participation. The NDCO program helps people with a disability access, and participate in, tertiary education and subsequent employment through a national network of NDCO's. The Australian Government is committed to helping people with a disability because there can be challenges finding a job or continuing with education after secondary school. The NDCO program aims to address those barriers by:

- Improving links between schools, universities, vocational education and training organisations, job services and organisations that support people with disabilities.
- Improving transitions between school/community and tertiary education and finding a job.
- Improving participation in tertiary education and work.

How can the NDCO program help? NDCO's work strategically with stakeholders in their region to reduce barriers to participation, help smooth transitions, build links and coordinate services for people with a disability between education, training and employment. NDCO's can:

- Establish or support links between local organisations to build bridges between tertiary education institutions and job services in order to help people with a disability transition from study to work.
- Work with educators, employers and other people in the community to identify and address barriers to participation.
- Work with local stakeholders to help them implement policies that are designed to help people with disabilities.

Disability Advocacy NSW (DA NSW)

Provides free, independent information and advocacy to people with disability, their families and carers. DA NSW advocates and negotiates for people with all disabilities when they have been treated unfairly with issues relating to government departments, employment, education, accommodation, transport, access, financial, health and disability services and the NDIS.

The organisation delivers an outreach service to Orange, Cowra, Mudgee, Parkes and Dubbo and surrounding towns.
